

The Creative Life Story Work podcast

Exploring how a creative approach to life story work can support care experienced children and young people make sense of their past and build a brighter future.

Episode 1: The story so far

A new model for life story work is being rolled out in the North East of England. We find out what led Tony Joyce, from South Tyneside Council, to get in touch with Blue Cabin to ask for help with the council's life story work. Listen.

Episode 2: What puts the 'Creative' into Creative Life Story Work?

Podcast host Dawn Williams talks to two of the professional artists who have been involved in Creative Life Story Work with children and young people. Listen.

Episode 3: Once upon a time: why is storytelling important?

Grace Lockrobin, Director of Thinking Space and Professor Richard Rose, Director of Therapeutic Life Story International talk about the power of the story and the role it plays when children are trying to make sense of their lives. Listen.

Episode 4: Whose story is it anyway?

Dawn Williams is joined by researcher Dr Delyth Edwards and artist Lisette Auton to discuss the ethics of storytelling. Listen.

Episode 5: More about me

Hear how Therapeutic Life Story Worker, Lynda Gallagher, is applying a creative approach to life story work with care-experienced children and young people. Listen.

Episode 6: Telling it like it is

Creative Facilitator Mary Robson joins Dawn to explore how we can set aside time to reflect on, and learn from, our work with care-experienced children and young people. Listen.

Listen at wearebluecabin.com/clswpodcast or wherever you get your podcasts. Produced and mixed by Will Sadler of Anya Media.